Many individuals that I would like to acknowledge contributed to this publication. The SIBIS-Archives Users Group Descriptive Standards Committee, comprised of Diane Vogt O'Connor, Judy Throm, and myself, and chaired by Harry Heiss, organized the seminar and thus made this volume possible. Richard Szary contributed to the conceptual development of the seminar. More than 100 Smithsonian staff, including archivists, registrars, and related information professionals set aside pressing work to participate in the seminar. The Smithsonian Institution's Office of Information Resource Management generously underwrote seminar expenses. Harry Heiss compiled the extensive bibliography that appears at the end. I extend a special thank you to Susanne Peckham for her superb editing. Wanda Perkins heroically handled administrative tasks related to publication. Ralph Walker made "camera-ready copy" a reality. David Bearman provided empathic guidance throughout the editorial process.
